WINE GUIDE

Bringing your wines to life

Welcome to our latest Crown Cellars wine brochure for 2024/5 which we very much hope you enjoy browsing through.

In this edition you'll find vintage information for the 2023/4 harvest, suggestions on how to capitalise on current UK consumer trends, some words from customers about their experiences working with the Crown Cellars team and a full range of really high quality wines to explore.

Amongst the Crown Cellars team we've commented more than once this year on how remarkably resilient our customers are. It has certainly been another year of constant change, not least with new government regulations on wine duty and their inevitable impact on pricing for consumers.

Trends towards 0% alcohol consumption have continued, as has the need to make every experience count when guests visit the On Trade. It has also been more obvious than ever that the good old British weather has the power to make or break the consumer's mood and determine whether they'll venture out of their homes to join us in our venues. Despite all of that, sales look sunny and you, our customers seem to be weathering the challenges wonderfully.

We've created some changes of our own this year too. In this brochure you'll find several new additions to the range and some exciting new labels to freshen up old favourites. We're already racing ahead with plans to add more exciting new wines and label designs next year, so watch this space.

Our aim will always remain the same – we want to be a partner to our customers and not just a supplier.

We'll continue doing anything we can to support with the right advice and the right options for your business, and we'll keep pushing to ensure we have the best quality and most competitively priced On Trade exclusive wines for you to choose from.

We hope you enjoy the new portfolio and look forward to seeing you through the year.

CROWN CELLARS WEBSITE

Exclusively serving the On-Trade

WE KNOW WHAT'S IMPORTANT TO THE ON-TRADE, AND WE AREN'T INTERESTED IN SELLING OUR WINES ANYWHERE ELSE.

Crown Cellars is 100% focussed on the On Trade. That's important to us because it helps our customers in lots of different ways.

We only put our exclusive brands where we want them, and don't ever sell to the off-trade. That means you won't come under pressure from deep-discounting supermarkets and stores.

Our brands are designed to be enjoyed at tables in restaurants, hotels, golf clubs, pubs and bars. We're not competing for attention on crowded supermarket shelves, so we can focus on making our labels visually enticing, without being shouty.

We can also be selective. We have no minimum volumes and aren't limited to working with industrial-scale producers. Our closest relationships are actually with smaller family businesses which we've worked with for years. We can support sustainable producers and quality-focussed wineries, even if they can only sell us a few hundred bottles a year – that means we can stock more interesting wines and react to trends more quickly.

We aren't just a wholesaler but a producer and brand-owner as well – we know what's important to the On-Trade, and we aren't interested in selling our wines anywhere else.

The state of the nation

Last year brought with it a joyous feeling that we were coming out of the miserable "Covid Years". That said, as we embarked on the 2023 campaign of events, there was still a sense of anxiety about how things would be received as we went out on the road for the first time in three years. We need not have worried. As we crisscrossed the country we had huge support from you, our customers. In fact, the general consensus amongst the Crown Cellars team was that activities were some of the most successful we have ever run. Let us hope that we can keep this momentum going in 2024.

Victoria Chapman (Crown Cellars' wine buyer) and I have settled into a routine of meeting up to review opportunities, undertake range selection tastings and talk about developments around us. For many years, I have been used to compiling my review of the year's vintage for your perusal, with some of the key highlights and challenges faced by different wine-producing regions of the world. (Incidentally, you will find some of my thoughts for the latest vintage included in the forthcoming pages of this portfolio brochure, and in this year's 'Pedley's Picks,' should you wish to know more.) Over the last two or three years though, our discussions have been as much about the price of fuel and energy, as about the vineyards themselves. Globally speaking the cost of manufacturing the bottles, powering the wineries and fuelling the delivery vehicles is having as much of an impact on consumers as good old-fashioned vintage quality, volume and global demand. Happily, although production costs remain quite high versus pre-pandemic levels, conditions seemed to stabilise towards the back end of 2023, making everything a little more manageable.

Notwithstanding the post-harvest rollercoaster, this vintage has still been one of the more fascinating to research. Globally the 2023 harvest is probably going to be the smallest in my lifetime. However, it's unlikely to have escaped your notice, that UK consumers have been drinking less alcohol in general. The same goes for many of our closest geographical neighbours like France, Italy, Spain and Germany. So at this moment, there is a strange sort of equilibrium between supply and demand. Good news for availability across some of our favourite wine regions, and a good opportunity at the same time to explore what's out there in terms of no- and low- alcohol drinks.

That is precisely what Victoria and I did late last year. De-alcoholised wines have been available in the UK for several decades. However, it has to be said that both quality and drinker acceptance have been tepid for much of this period. But "The Times They Are a-Changin'" in the words of Bob Dylan. A sizeable group of consumers chooses not to drink alcoholic beverages for a variety of reasons but nowadays expects to be offered a choice of low or no alcohol beers, wines and spirits when they go out. Fortunately the quality of these drinks has improved markedly in recent years. Vacuum distillation, spinning cone columns and reverse osmosis permit the removal of alcohol without ruining the character and quality of the base wine. I have been pleasantly surprised by some of the de-alcoholised wines that I have encountered, and the Australians in particular seem to have embraced the technology, producing a number of decent options. We have made four additions to our portfolio this year, which you'll find on page 126, alongside some rather lovely Italian and Alsace wines that we have also introduced.

Snowflakes are drifting past my window as I write. It would be very easy to feel despondent with the news and chilly weather at this time of year. However, the on trade has shown incredible resilience over the last few years and I was struck by the optimism I encountered on my travels in the trade last year. I am reassured that we can continue to flourish in spite of the ongoing challenges and general madness going on around us. Don't let me down!

JONATHAN PEDLEY,
MASTER OF WINE

New for 2024

Here is a selection of our exciting new listings for this year, along with comments from our Master of Wine Jonathan.

FREIXENET 0.0% Sparkling Rosé

"A pale pink bubbly that is delicate and citrusy with medium sweetness on the palate."

This year we have made several additions to our portfolio of de-alcoholised wines. This means that for the first time we can offer a full choice of options, with the Freixenet as our sparkling rose option. It stood out among other wines of its kind, for its delicacy and freshness of strawberry and raspberry fruit. The palate has a medium sweetness and lively acidity to balance, it is sure to be a hit this summer as a refreshing afternoon drink.

HARDY'S Zero Chardonnay

"Mid-lemon in colour, fairly dry with lots of Chardonnay character on the nose: peach, melon and vanilla."

If you remain sceptical of de-alcoholised wine, give this Chardonnay a try; I think it is the best de-alcoholised wine I have tried. It actually tastes of Chardonnay, complete with ripe varietal fruit and a touch of oak, but without the alcohol. Some de-alcoholised wines can have a rather generic confected "fruit juice" aroma and a sweet taste. This one by contrast shows wine character and is fairly dry, with plenty of refreshing acidity. Careful fruit selection and vacuum distillation at low temperature are two of the elements behind its success. As you would expect of a Chardonnay you can pair this wine with fish such as grilled salmon or try it with roast chicken.

WOLF BLASS Zero Shiraz 0%

"Deep pink ruby in colour, with youthful blackberry and blackcurrant character."

Making a decent de-alcoholised red is one of the biggest challenges in the canon of low alcohol beverages. The use of sweetness to balance the absence of alcohol in whites and rosés is no great shock, not least because many classic whites and rosés have natural residual sugar. By contrast, nearly all traditional reds are bone dry. What is more, part of the structure of red wines is the tannic grip on the palate. Replacing the balancing alcohol with sugar gives a very different mouthfeel. As a result the winemaking team at Wolf Blass need to be congratulated on producing their Zero Shiraz. The wine has an attractive, youthful blackberry and blackcurrant aroma. There is decent weight (mid-full bodied) on the palate, not too much sweetness and some proper grainy tannins on the finish.

"A salmon pink rosé that has youthful sherbet fruit aromas and a medium sweet palate."

The winemaking team at McGuigan have over fifteen years of experience developing alcohol free wine. Interestingly for this rosé they go for a Muscat dominated grape mix (45% Muscat Gordo and 20% Muscat Blanc à Petits Grains), good for immediate fruitiness. The 28% Shiraz component provides the pink colour. Once fermented the wine is de-alcoholised using the spinning cone method (a relatively gentle way to remove the alcohol). The resulting wine is mid salmon pink with youthful sherbety red fruit aromas, and a medium sweet taste with rounded acidity. Drink well chilled.

CANTINA DEL GARDA Valpolicella

"Light-bodied and lively with gentle tannins, perfumed aromas of red cherry and rose petal, and a fruity finish."

This is a deliciously toothsome and uncomplicated Valpolicella. It is made from a blend of the local black grape varieties (Corvina Veronese, Corvinone, Rondinella and Molinara) grown on the iron rich soils east of Lake Garda. The colour is a mid to pale ruby. It is perfumed on the nose showing red cherry and rose petal aromas. The palate is light bodied and lively with gentle youthful tannins. Serve slightly chilled as an accompaniment to antipasti or informal Italian dishes such as pizza.

BOCCANTINO Fiano Appassito

"A fascinating off dry white wine that has vibrant floral and citrus fruit aromas."

Hand picked Fiano grapes are taken to the winery and a portion undergoes gentle drying (hence the description "appassito"). Fermentation follows in stainless steel tanks, and some of the newly made wine spends three months in wooden barrels before blending and bottling. The result is a fascinating white wine that shows the delicate aromatic character of the Fiano but has more depth and richness than one normally finds with this variety. On the nose look out for floral and citrus fruit aromas (grapefruit in particular). The off dryness and weight in the mouth are balanced by good acidity. Try this wine with chicken, pork or tuna.

New for 2024

BARTOLI GIUSTI Brunello di Montalcino

"A rich, mature red wine that exhibits notes of spice, fig and dried fruits."

The grapes for this wine are harvested from low yielding Sangiovese vines in the DOCG zone surrounding the hilltop town of Montalcino. After crushing, the wine is fermented in contact with its skins for just over a fortnight. Once racked the wine spends three years maturing in botti (8,000 litre oak barrels). A further six months of ageing takes place post bottling before release. In colour the wine is a palish garnet-brick. It has a fairly pronounced nose that shows richness and maturity with notes of spice, fig and prune. In the mouth it is fullish bodied, the low acidity complementing the ripe grainy tannins. Game (venison, wild boar, pheasant) or ossobuco would be great partners.

TRULLI Primitivo Salento IGP

"Mid pink-ruby in colour, fullish bodied and soft with lots of ripe red fruits, gentle acidity and gentle tannins."

This 100% Primitivo is as soft and ripe as you'd expect coming from the sun-soaked terrains of Southern Puglia. The vines on which the grapes are grown are between 15 and 25 years old, well into their stride and producing more elegant, complex fruit. Full-bodied and velvety with an indulgent 14% alcohol, it's a lovely addition to our Italian portfolio for the year, and one which we're expecting will very much appeal to consumers and customers alike for its immediate fruity appeal and attractive aromas of black cherry, prune and white pepper spice.

TERRABUONA Montepulciano d'Abruzzo

"A medium-bodied wine with youthful dark fruit and blueberry notes, gentle acidity and rounded tannins."

Montepulciano is another of Italy's well-known wines from the hot, dry Mediterranean south. It is generally appreciated for offering plump, deeply-coloured wines with unobtrusive tannins and an easy-drinking style. We said goodbye to a couple of listings last year and wanted to find a quality replacement that we could offer customers at a decent price-point. This one is a mid pink-purple colour, mid-bodied on the palate with low acidity and rounded tannins. We liked the youthful dark fruit which it had to offer, blueberry in particular with other dark bramble fruit mingling in.

EUGENE KLIPFEL Pinot Blanc

"A light bodied, uncomplicated, gluggable, dry white wine with apple and pear aromas."

This year we are switching our source of Alsace wines to Maison Klipfel. This family-owned firm was founded in 1824 and is now in its sixth generation. The Pinot Blanc wines of Alsace contrast sharply with the region's more famous Gewurztraminers. Whilst the latter are often rich and aromatic, the former are light and uncomplicated. Klipfel Pinot Blanc has simple green fruit on the nose: apple and pear in particular. The palate is dry, not too acidic and lightish bodied. Drunk well chilled, this wine is the perfect "by the glass" option. In keeping with the lightness and approachability of the wine, the obvious food partners would be informal things such as salads, quiches and grilled prawns.

EUGENE KLIPFEL Gewurztraminer

"An intensely perfumed white with hyacinth, lychee and Turkish Delight aromas, full bodied and medium dry."

Although austerity and self-denial seem to be all the rage at the moment, you have to be a bit of a puritan not to indulge in the decadent pleasure of drinking a good Alsace Gewurztraminer. Klipfel have made a classic example. It is mid straw in colour with a hint of gold. On the nose it is intensely perfumed: hyacinth, Turkish Delight and lychee aromas are all present. The palate is medium dry and full bodied. The finish is ripe and juicy. I would be happy to enjoy this on its own but food partners might include turkey, pungent cheeses (Stinking Bishop, Munster, Époisses) and rich terrines.

BODEGAS MEDIEVO Gran Reserva Rioja

"Beautifully mellow and mature red wine, full bodied and warm with vanilla, plum and clove notes."

This venerable Gran Reserva comes from one of our most dependable suppliers - Bodegas Medievo in Rioja. I find it a shame that current fashions favour chunky, youthful, "almost New World" Riojas over this elegant, savoury, wood-aged style, however it does mean that canny drinkers can track down complex and mature wines like this one, for incredibly reasonable prices. Tempranillo and Garnacha grapes were selected from old vines that grow at high altitude, and the wines are aged after fermentation for two years in barrels (70% American oak and 30% French oak). After bottling, the wine rests for a further three years before release for sale. The resulting wine is a mid-deep garnet-brick colour. The nose is beautifully mellow and mature with notes of vanilla, Elvas plum and clove. The palate is full bodied and warming but there is still a good grip of fleshy tannins. Roast red meats and mature hard cheeses (Cheddar, Manchego, Comté etc.) would be perfect accompaniments.

Sustainable, Organic & Biodynamic

Organic sales have experienced years of consecutive growth in the UK, with beers, wines and spirits being among the fastest growing categories – embracing these practices can help you drive appeal.

Green and ethical labelling is however still quite confusing for consumers and producers alike. There are so many certification systems, some of which come with a high level of cost or bureaucracy, and each certification sets its own standards, some more stringent than others. For many producers, particularly smaller businesses, choosing to set their own benchmarks and environmental commitments can achieve the same or better results, though they can't make claims on labels, (terms like 'organic' are rightly controlled by legislation, protecting consumers from being misled.)

We have chosen to give you all the information so you can make your choices accordingly. If you wish to select a range which comes with official organic, biodynamic or sustainable certification so you can label it on your menus, look out for wines labelled 'C', for certified. If your aim is to support the underlying principles even if the wines can't state an official claim, look out for wines with 'P', for practicing – this means our producers have told us about environmental standards they set for themselves, but they don't subscribe to any official certification program as yet. Let us know if you'd like to know more about specific wines in the range.

ORGANIC

Organic farming involves the strict control of pesticides, fungicides, herbicides and fertilizers, and in some countries there are controls over the use of winery chemicals. The goal is to promote healthy biologically active soil, preserve natural soil structures and promote biodiversity.

BIODYNAMIC

This approach has a lot in common with organic farming, with a more philosophical ethos. Biodynamic growers consider the whole vineyard to be a holistic organism in tune with natural rhythms on an astrological scale.

SUSTAINABLE

This refers to the long-term impact of our activity on the planet, whether through the environmental impact of farming, renewable energy sources or general energy consumption, water and heat recycling, emissions, social responsibility or packaging recycling. Different accreditations can cover different areas.

Vegan Range

We have a huge selection of wines confirmed as suitable for vegans. Here’s just a selection of our favourites.

A lot of consumers find this area quite illogical – grapes are 100% vegan, right?

Yes, but it’s the winemaking and quality process that determines whether the final bottled wine in front of them is vegan or not.

Consumers expect their wine to be clear and bright, which takes a bit of work to achieve in the winery. Wine would naturally be cloudy either due to grape compounds floating around, or due to natural acids or proteins developing particles or a haze after bottling. The process of making the wine clear and stable is called ‘fining’.

Fining can be achieved in a number of ways, for example using animal products like gelatin or isinglass. Other options include egg whites or casein, which is derived from cow’s milk – these would be suitable for vegetarians, but not vegans. Vegan friendly options include different kinds of filtration, or more recently pea proteins.

If you would like to list a Vegan or Vegetarian range, we have a huge selection available. Look out for our V or Ve symbols. For full details, please ask your local Wines & Spirits Manager for our nutritional information.

VALUE GROWTH

Rosé experienced the biggest gains within the category during 2023, ahead of both white and red in value and volume growth, so clearly this is a big area of interest at the moment.

According to CGA*, 35% of GB wine consumers drink rosé in the On Trade, so there's plenty of opportunity to capture the attention of your guests.

One reason for its versatility is consumer perception that rose can be just as suitable for food occasions as it is for drink-led visits.

Also interesting is the increasing openness among consumers toward drier styles of rosé.

42% of consumers are still attracted to styles like USA Zinfandel Rosé, so it's still important to cover this on wine lists. However there is growing interest in drier options as well. The strongest opportunity seems to lie with dry premium styles.

Partly, this could have been influenced by the success of famous celebrity branded rosés or premium Provence styles, but all the evidence suggests having a dry premium rosé on your list could be an effective way to engage guests and grow sales.

Amongst all of this positivity for the rosé category, then, why not explore our wonderful collection of enticing and delightful rosés, and add something new to your list this season? With our range of different options and price-points, we can help you find something to capitalise on this emerging trend.

Of consumers would order Rosé more frequently if more premium options were available

62%

Of Rosé consumers are likely to pay more for a better-quality drink

47%

Of consumers would pay more for Rosé now compared to a year ago

The perfect match

Our team is here to give detailed, tailored advice on food and wine matching. We also have a quick guide here, to help pair your dishes with great wines that will complement their flavours and textures.

WINE AND FOOD MATCHING RULES

Flavour profiles of food and wine should complement each other. Light dishes suit lighter wines and heavily flavoured dishes need a richer wine. A simple white fish dish suits a delicate Verdicchio or Gavi, while a full-bodied Chardonnay complements a rich fish pie.

Don't be constrained by the standard white wine with fish and red wine with meat approach. Just ensure that the flavour and body of a wine work with a dish. A full-bodied Chardonnay will work beautifully with a roast chicken, and a light red such as Pinot Noir will perfectly partner tuna or monkfish.

Food and wines throughout the meal are generally a progression. Move from lighter to fuller flavours and from drier to sweeter. A light-bodied Pinot Grigio can taste thin if your palate has adjusted to that full-flavoured Chardonnay; a dry Sauvignon Blanc can be too acidic after a juicy Viognier.

You can reduce the risk for your customers by offering a choice of wines with each dish. Try to include a safe bet and a more adventurous choice. The same applies when thinking about your range of wines available by the glass.

Spicy foods and wine can mix. Juicy reds such as Shiraz or Carménère will be a great partner for an Indian curry, whilst aromatic whites such as Riesling or Gewürztraminer will work with fresher Thai dishes.

Make recommendations for wines to partner dishes on your menus and specials board. This gives you a double selling opportunity.

Wine & Food Pairing

Generally whites are good partners to most fish, white meats, salads and lightly spiced dishes
To partner a strongly flavoured dish you will need an assertive wine, whilst a milder, more delicately flavoured food could do with a lighter style.

Reds make good matches to red meats, tomato-based sauces, mushrooms and strong cheese dishes
Spicy food can bring out the tannin in red wines, so steer clear of heavily oaked or tannic reds with curries and dishes with lots of heat.
It's key to match the weight of the wine to the robustness of the food.

DROUGHT

It was a cold winter in the Andes with some snow fall but not enough to end the cumulative drought. There was great anxiety about a series of frost “events” in the spring and this culminated on the night of 30th November / 1st December when a polar front brought icy conditions to Mendoza. Damage was extensive and it was clear from this point that the 2023 harvest would be small. As is so often the case, after punishing cold in the spring the summer became brutally hot and dry. The picking started early and was rapid. There were no disease issues so quality should at least be good. As predicted, the spring frost and chronic drought saw yields reduced markedly, with the national crop down 29% against the five year average.

After extensive frost and punishing summer drought the 2023 harvest was small, but quality should at least be very good.

Alta Vista

We've worked with our friends at Alta Vista for years and love their vibrant French-Argentinian style.

The beautifully restored winery in the heart of Chacras de Coria dates back to 1899, with underground cellars housing more than 1,000 French oak barrels to mature these wonderful wines. Grapes are grown in their high-altitude Estate vineyards around Luján de Cuyo and Valle de Uco, and each terroir is managed individually and vinified separately to suit its unique characteristics.

This enables them to make some highly specialist Single Vineyard Malbecs, so if you're looking for a unique experience, you're in the right place. AV are also committed to sustainable viticulture and supporting social and economic projects in their local community.

A very small harvest, but cooler weather should offer some pleasant white wines.

"It's grim Down Under" sums things up both in the vineyards and on the export market. For the third year in a row La Niña maintained its grip on weather systems in the Southern Hemisphere. It was cool and there was persistent heavy rain during the winter and spring. Flooding was widespread. The high humidity triggered disastrous outbreaks of mildew. The resulting harvest was late and very small. Overall quality will be ordinary. The total national crush was down 26% against the ten year average. As if these production challenges were not enough, the export market is looking pretty sick as well: volume was down 4% and value down 11% in the year to 30th September 2023.

ROBERT OATLEY

Pocketwatch wines are exclusive to Crown Cellars and are heartily endorsed by Jonathan Pedley as a brilliant example of modern Australian winemaking – light, refreshing and vibrant whites, and non-jammy reds with just a touch of oak.

The fruit for this pair comes from the Central ranges, a region west of Sydney on the cooling slopes of the Great Dividing Range.

The Oatley family is known for its long history of fine Australian craftsmanship, so you're in good hands. The Shiraz offers intense black cherry and blackberry fruit, and the dry light Chardonnay displays vibrant citrus and yellow plum.

HOT DRY SUMMER

Austria’s year started off with a dry winter and a late, slow spring start, not least because of cold wet weather in April, though at least this helped to get some moisture into the soil. The summer was largely hot and dry, and the crop is estimated to be just a tad down on 2022.

A very similar picture for Bulgaria meant quality overall was very good. The official crop size was down 30% here, however according to Domaine Boyar, this is not due to any viticultural issues but rather to a number of growers selling their grapes for home winemaking, instead of to commercial wineries!

Elqui Valley, Andes

Winter rainfall was adequate and there was also enough snowfall in the Andes for those producers dependent on irrigation later in the season.

Bud burst and flowering took place at around the normal times and passed without incident. What 2023 will be remembered for is the remorseless heat of summer. Bush fires aside, the vines ripened very quickly. In many regions the harvest started between one and four weeks ahead of normal. The fruit was beautifully healthy, although tannic ripeness and aromatic complexity may not have reached their full potential in some areas. Yields were impacted by the high temperatures: the total crop was down 10% versus the five year average.

It was definitely a case of a “country of two halves” when one considers the 2023 vintage in France. In spite of heavy summer rainfall, northern regions (Champagne, Burgundy, Loire) had bumper crops. The spring was frost free, the flowering went well and the growers were able to keep the threat of mildew in check. By contrast, southern regions (Bordeaux and Languedoc-Roussillon) struggled to cope with the mildew, drought and a late summer heatwave.

In most areas the white grapes coped better than the black grapes with the challenging weather, Chardonnay frequently being mentioned in despatches.

Domaine de la Baume

Domaine de la Baume is one of Languedoc-Roussillon's most emblematic wine estates, established in 1880. The mosaic of surrounding terroirs in the South of France, sunny and dotted with olive trees, enables each of the key international grape varieties to find an ideal spot and thrive. As a result, these wines range from powerful and intense to fresh and aromatic, each very pure in character.

Chai de Bordes

Bordeaux is something of an enigma. Some of the world's most famous (and correspondingly expensive) wines are created there, and we have no problem finding enthusiastic buyers for our delicious Margaux, Pomerol or St Emilion wines. But the number of bottles we sell annually of great quality, affordable Bordeaux Rouge and Blanc is relatively tiny, despite the fact that French Sauvignon Blanc and Merlot are a staple part of many UK wine lists. The fact is, most of our customers just don't notice these lovely wines. So why not consider them for your next wine list? Signposted on menus as Merlot or Sauvignon, guests will easily understand what they're signing up for, plus there is prestige attached to the 'Bordeaux' part, so they may be willing to spend a little more.

Chablis

These beautiful Chablis wines are the creation of Catherine and Louis Poitout, both of whom grew up with a deep understanding of vines, winemaking and Burgundian terroir.

Catherine learned cultivation at a young age alongside her father Raoul Gautherin, while Louis learned alongside his own father, talented vineyard manager and winemaker Michel Poitout. Together they have built their own domaine where they can focus their careful attention and preserve ecological economy, sustainability and biodiversity.

Picpoul

In the heart of the Languedoc region, in Occitania, is Domaine de Petit Roubié, a certified Organic Agriculture (ECOVERT) domaine which has been farmed organically since 1985. Across the estate's 80 hectares of vineyard, the aim is to encourage a resurgence of the region's natural fauna and flora - bees, butterflies and wildflowers are allowed to flourish alongside the vines.

The wine itself is a delicious example of Picpoul de Pinet and was an immediate hit with the team when we first tried it. Youthful floral and fruit aromas and a dry, refreshingly acid palate with flavours of white peach, citrus and salt hints, make this the perfect accompaniment to prawns, scallops and pretty much all types of white fish.

Val d'Orcia, Italy

Torrential spring rain caused rampant outbreaks of mildew across the centre and south of Italy. Regions such as Abruzzo and Sicilia saw their potential crops halved, whilst Puglia and Toscana lost about a third of their harvests. In the north the mildew pressure was better managed and losses were a lot smaller: the Veneto (crucial for the production of Prosecco and Pinot Grigio) saw yields down by only around 10%. The summer was characterised by periods of fearsome heat punctuated by damp interludes. The picking itself passed without any major incidents. Overall quality will be patchy.

Veneto fared better than some areas of the country, but conditions were challenging. We've worked to ensure we're bringing in the best quality Prosecco and Pinot Grigio wines this year.

Moldova is one of the most significant wine producing countries of Eastern Europe, and winemaking has long been a part of Moldova's culture.

With an undulating landscape of low rolling hills, cool winters and warm summers which avoid extreme temperatures in either direction, and steady moderate rainfall throughout the year, conditions are practically perfect for producing light, Italian-style Pinot Grigio at a competitive price point. While Moldova didn't escape Europe's generally challenging weather conditions for 2023, the crop was a comparatively modest 10% down on 2022.

Casita Miro, Auckland, New Zealand

Fine dry weather for the harvest and a healthy plentiful Sauvignon Blanc crop puts New Zealand in good stead this year.

A wet winter got plenty of moisture into the soil and it remained a little cool and damp during the spring and summer. Cyclone Gabrielle hit the North Island in February, bringing gale force winds and torrential rain. Low lying vineyards with poor draining soils saw extensive flooding. However, by the time the storm reached the South Island it had lost most of its energy and moisture. This meant that the all important Sauvignon Blanc crop in Marlborough got through pretty much unscathed. What is more, the arrival of autumn ushered in fine dry weather for the harvest. At 501,000 tonnes the total New Zealand crop was the second largest on record. Overall quality should be good.

Lawson's Dry Hills is a pioneer of the Marlborough wine industry, focusing heavily on sustainability and staying true to their values. Their wines are 100% certified sustainable and net carbon zero, and the company regularly wins plenty of awards. As a small hands-on team, they have control over every aspect of the winemaking process from vineyard to bottle, and with vineyard blocks throughout Marlborough's three sub-regions, they can blend from many terroirs to add depth and complexity to their wines. Their many sustainability initiatives include use of solar power, capturing and recycling rainwater from the winery roof, creating native wetland areas, and planting hundreds of native vine species in their Awatere Valley vineyards to support biodiversity.

Late
SEPTEMBER RAIN

Quality
OVERALL GOOD

There was plentiful winter rainfall, refreshing the soil after a period of cumulative drought. A warm spring got the vines off to a good start and there were no issues with frost or problems at flowering time. As one would expect the summer was dry: that said temperatures in July were not excessive.

There was a heatwave at the end of August but the vines coped well. Rain on 3rd September in the Douro was perfectly timed to trigger the final ripening of the black grapes (many of the white grapes had been harvested already). Much of the Touriga Nacional was picked over the following fortnight. There were some further bouts of rain during the latter part of the vintage, requiring careful work in the vineyards.

Summer
HEAVY

DRIER
THAN USUAL

Stellenbosch, South Africa

Winter in the Cape was warmer and drier than normal. This triggered an early bud burst and an early flowering. The fruit set was relatively light. There was an entirely unseasonal downpour in December followed by a summer that was a tad cooler than usual, slowing down the development of the grapes. Harvest commenced at the beginning of February under favourable conditions but big challenges came towards the end of the month when heavy rainfall returned. There were two further bouts of torrential rain in March, slap bang in the middle of the black grape harvest. The picking was difficult, making quality patchy. Yields were down by 12% against the five year average.

The vintage was a challenge but cooler conditions mean there are some good whites to be found. You'd have to go a long way to beat the Millstream Chenin Blanc for outstanding varietal character at this price point.

5 YEAR AVERAGE

Spain avoided the heavy spring and summer rainfall that tormented the growers in many other parts of Europe. As a result mildew was not an issue. Rather, chronic drought (more severe the further south you go) remains the biggest issue.

This was compounded by an August that was shockingly hot, with successive periods where the thermometer was stuck over 40°C. Desiccation of the grapes caused the national crop to plunge by 23% against the five year average.

Fortunately, Rioja has come through the summer heat and some September showers in good shape.

Organic
Garnacha

THIS ORGANIC OLD
VINE GRENACHE IS TRULY SPECIAL.

Deeply coloured, indulgent and richly full-bodied, it is made with 100% Garnacha Tintorera, native to the limestone-rich Almansa plateau in southeast Albacete, Spain. Here, mature 45-60 year-old vines produce grapes with a high level of concentration. Fully organic farming allows the vines to express their purest character, while careful hand-harvesting and delicate vinification preserve maximum aromatic complexity without extracting too much tannin.

The resulting wine is deeply coloured with rich strawberry, jam, dried fruit and toast aromas. Soft, juicy tannins and plenty of natural acidity perfectly balance the sweet rich berry, plum jam and strawberry fruit on the palate, backed up with vanilla and clove. The finish is long and luxuriant. This wine can be enjoyed all by itself, and would pair wonderfully with very rich roasted meat dishes and flame-grilled high-quality steaks.

Medievo

We've worked with our friends at Bodegas Medievo for many, many years now, and we consider theirs to be some of the most consistently high-quality artisan Rioja wines around. The grapes come from their own vineyards, around 500m above sea level and up to 50 years old – quite literally, the fruit of generations of work. The wines themselves are an elegant, modern take on the classic style.

2023 crop
EXCELLENT QUALITY

The spring was largely frost free and a dry June allowed a successful flowering. Crucial to setting what would turn out to be a bumper crop was the wet July: the vines soaked up the moisture, grew strongly and started to ripen the grapes. Coming into September, the vines were laden with grapes but there was some anxiety about the weather on the run in to harvest.

The growers need not have worried, the skies cleared and we experienced several weeks of excellent late summer weather. In many cases the picking was able to start a little earlier than usual.

It is hard to find any dissenting voices concerning both the quality and quantity of this year's fruit.

After a normal winter, the spring in Uruguay showed significant La Niña influence, with warmer than average temperatures and very low rainfall. The first half of January was also hot and dry, but then everything changed. The second half of January and February were wetter and cooler than usual.

Conditions stabilised in March, although temperatures remained on the low side. However, the team at Finca Traversa report that the fruit was healthy and that the harvest was on time.

California's chronic drought ended spectacularly in 2023 and the growing season was long and slow, there are some good quality wines to be found.

The 2023 growing season in California was something of a flashback to the temperate weather patterns of the 1980s and 1990s. The winter saw torrential downpours: the chronic drought was over. It stayed cool and damp in the spring. The vines got off to a slow start and never really caught up. The summer was mild. Intermittent rain was never far away, but the apocalyptic predictions around "Hurricane Hilary" and the "Atmospheric River" did not materialise. The harvest began in August and lasted right through until November. Most picking schedules were running between a week and a month later than in recent years. The best grapes show an ideal combination of steadily accumulated sugar balanced by retained acidity. With time, we should be able to enjoy some classic Californian wines.

CHARDONNAY

A frost free April and fine weather in June for the flowering allowed the vines to set an enormous crop.

This nigh on textbook spring was followed by a strange summer. July and August saw changeable weather: there was quite a lot of rain and the temperatures were often on the cool side. The vine growth was vigorous but the high humidity did encourage the development of Botrytis cinerea (grey rot). The weather changed completely in September with the arrival of a heatwave. The official start of the harvest was 2nd September. Given the heat and the residual risk of fungal infections the fruit was gathered at pace. Chardonnay is the variety of the vintage: the picture for the Pinot Noir and Meunier is more variable.

ZIMOR

EXCLUSIVE WINES
EXCLUSIVE TO CROWN CELLARS

Zimor is our award-winning range of wines from the young, dynamic Italian team over at C&C in Villotta di Chions.

Specialists in Prosecco and the still wines of Friuli and Veneto, we've been working with this small team since the company was founded in 2009, and we love their passion and curiosity for all things wine. We've noticed they never sit still, regularly coming to us with new ideas or floating innovation for the UK market. They're also constantly researching new ways to drive quality, finding the best vineyards, encouraging careful viticultural and winemaking practices, and generally trying to make the best wines possible. Sustainability is a big part of their agenda, having just invested in a cutting-edge, eco-sustainable winemaking and bottling plant to reduce their carbon footprint by approximately 70%.

vs 2022
10%
TOTAL
CROP

As well as experiencing little in the way of spring frost in 2023, the Prosecco vineyards in the Veneto region of north eastern Italy largely dodged the terrible mildew problems that afflicted places further south in May.

That said, the summer was testing for the vines as the weather swung between cool, damp interludes and hot, dry episodes. There were some localised hail losses, the commune of Conegliano (one of the posh producers of Prosecco) being caught out. It is a relief to report that the harvest passed off without any major incidents. Yields in the Veneto were down around 10%. There remains price tension because of continuing demand from the UK and USA (this is before you factor in the drastic increases in energy costs and dry goods that producers are having to pay).

NEW SUSTAINABILITY ACCREDITATION

Alongside celebrating their 75th anniversary in 2023, Viticoltori Ponte recently also celebrated their new sustainability accreditation from SQNPI (Integrated Production National Quality System), which we're really proud of. The accreditation covers every aspect of production from vineyard to winery, minimising the use of synthetic chemicals and holding producers to strict technical sustainability standards. Ponte Prosecco DOC Extra Dry is the first to be certified, and other wines will quickly follow including Ponte Pinot Grigio DOC. Look out for the distinctive 'Bee' logo on labels this year!

Ponte wines are exclusive to Crown Cellars in the UK.

Sparkling wine

With Champagne pricing rising ever-higher, and Prosecco being such a different style of wine, it isn't surprising that consumers are beginning to seriously explore Crémant wines as a high-quality alternative. Unlike Prosecco these wines are made in the 'traditional method', i.e. they are allowed to undergo the all-important second fermentation in bottles to achieve their sparkle, rather than in bulk tanks. They are also permitted to rest on their lees, offering them the potential to develop beautifully complex biscuit, butter or pastry notes.

This Crémant de Limoux is a beautiful example of what 18 months resting on lees can achieve - a delicious blend of Chardonnay, Chenin Blanc and Pinot Noir grapes, this fine and elegant wine offers delicious fresh citrus and floral aromas. On the palate it is creamy with rich yeasty and biscuit notes, a delicate mousse and a long lingering finish.

Alcohol Free & Low Alcohol

"Rather than championing just one brand, we assessed a broad range of no- and low-alcohol wines currently on the market, selecting the wines we felt were the best in class choice for each key style: still red, white and rose, sparkling white and rose, sparkling single serve. We assessed the wines from two angles: whether it was a good quality alternative to its alcoholic counterpart, and whether it was a pleasant drink in its own right. We hope you enjoy the new range, and as this area of the market continues to grow we'll keep an eye out for new and exciting additions."

HARDYS

In the heart of the McLaren Vale, at 202 Main Road, you'll discover the original location of Thomas Hardy's wine cellar, converted in 1878 from an old flour mill. For over 170 years, this address has been at the heart of the region helping McLaren Vale to flourish and prosper. You can still visit the original winery today, (though you'd find the winemaking technology considerably more modern.)

Hardys make 202 Main Road wines exclusively for Crown Cellars in the UK, you won't find them anywhere else and we don't sell to anyone except the On Trade.
